82 The Duke of Monmouth Pleading for His Life
before James II.

(Exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1882.)

" . . . . . To see him and not to spare him was an outrage on humanity and decency. This outrage the king resolved to commit. The arms of the prisoner were bound behind him with a silken cord; and thus secured he was ushered into the presence of the implacable kinsman whom he had wronged. Then Monmouth threw himself on the ground and crawled to the king's feet."—Macaulay's History of England.

84 Clearing the Canals from Weeds in the Pontine Marshes

To keep these canals clear of weeds, about two hundred buffaloes are employed the greater part of the year, and are driven in daily for several hours; two men follow in light punts, and keep them in a compact mass, filling up the whole breadth of the Canal; and when working against the stream, they offer such a check to the current that the water pours over their backs like a mountain torrent. In their endeavours to escape their drivers, they tear away the weeds, which are carried down the stream to the sea. One often rises behind the boats, either having dived to escape the punting pole, or having been pushed under by his companions.

85 The Visitation and Surrender of Syon Nunnery
(at Isleworth, Middlesex) to the Commissioners in the Reign of Henry VIII.

Syon was of the Order of St. Bridget, and was one of the first large monasteries that was suppressed, the convent having been accused of harbouring the king's enemies, of denying his supremacy, and having entangled itself with the affair of the Maid of Kent.

(Exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1846.)

" But Hector, Priam's son,
 Not to the fire, but to the dogs I give.

 Daughter of Jove, the ravening dogs restrained;
 . . . .
 Apollo too, a cloudy veil from heaven
 Spread o'er the plain, and covered all the space
 Where lay the dead."
